A Quaint Old Virginia Town. [Washington Letter to Pittsburg Dispatch.]

With memo.ies as precious as those of its ancient namesake on the southern shores of the blue Tyrrhanean Sea, our Alexandria is the most flouted and insulted of towns.

that he, if no one else, thinks is awfully funny. He finds food for laughter in everything he sees. The leisurely air of the average citizen excites his risibilities to copious overflow. A few spears of gress growing between the old fashioned cobble stones which pave the streets, such as are yet found plentifully in Pittsburg, I believe make him roar to the bursting point. Being the sickilest, slenderest, spindliest, dwarfishest product of a harren intellectual period, being the store of a harren intellectual period, being the store of a harren intellectual period, being the store of the stockholders and directors of the VIRGIN-1A MARBLE COMPANY, the following SHARES and CERTIFICATES OF STOCK, to wit: Certificate No. 11 for 234 shares; certificates No. 12 and 15 for 312 shares; certificates No. 16 for 78 shares; certificate No. 58 for 10 shares, and certificate No. 58 for 10 shares. a fine compliment to the fertility of the soil.

I like the quaint old buildings one finds in Georgetown, with arched doors and old knockers, and latticed and dormer windows and immense chimneys. I like Alexandria for the same reason. There is enough busi-ness there to keep it alive and improving a little, and enough decay to give it the charm of maturity. I like both better than Washington, just as I like the rich colors of winding stairs, panelled rooms, carved, wooden mantelpieces, extending to the ceiling, and a massive pillared porch, at what was once the front. It was built away back in the seventies of the last century. The waters of the Potomac then lapped its walls. Now they are half a mile away, driven back by the made land for the docks.

Another attractive old mansion is the residence of Washington while he lived in Alexandria; and just here let me say that there are many interesting relics of Washington in private hands in Alexandria, and also in a collection that is open to the pub names, there was many a good banquet in honor of the nobilities of the day, Washington and Lafayette especially. From the porch of Gadsby's Tavern, on the 17th of November, 1799, Washington reviewed the Independent Bines of Alexandria, after the war was over and there issued what was war was over, and there issued what was called his last military order. His first birthday ball was given here February 22d, 1797, and in the big ballroom on the second floor, which looks very much now as it did then, the General led the dance in person. On Oct. 6, 1824, a splendid banquet was given by the Masonic fraternity at this house, then called Clagett's Tavern, to the Marquis de Lafay ette, and among those present were John Quincy Adams, Commodores Rogers and Porter, Generals Macombe and Jones, of Maryland, and George Washington Parke interest attached to it that clings to his residence, to Gadsby's Tavern, or to the head-quarters of Braddcck. But it is a fine old church of colonial days, and in its yard there is many a tombstone dated-in the last and next the last decade of the last century. In it is the pew of Washington, or rather of his famile for the most reliable historians.

Through the ancient commercial glory of Alexandria has departed, when the docks were crowded with vessels, and the streets with wagons leaded with erain and tobacco from many a league inland, its future glory vance.

By VIRTUE OF A DECREE of the Corporation Court of the city of Alexandria, Va., rendered at its September term, 1850, in the cause of Daniel W. little, and enough decay to give it the charm of maturity. I like both better than Washington, just as I like the rich colors of autumn better than the crude green of spring.

I hope Alexandria will never lose its mature and leisurely way, But I am convinced that it will one day be to Washingson what Brooklyn is to New York—what Allegheny is to Pittsburg. Even now many who debusiness in Washington, and many in Government employ, reside in the ancient town.

The situation of the town is beautiful. It rises from its harbor like "Genoa the Superb." The expanse of river is like that of a fine bay. In every direction there is charming secnery, and the air is wholesome. One can live much cheaper there than in Washington, and, after the bustle of Washington, the grateful to retire to the quiet of layer to the spring.

Washington, and, after the bustle of Washington, and, after the bustle of Washington, it is grateful to retire to the quist of Alexandria. Just now there has been initiated a movement to build a great national highway from Washington through Arling ton and Alexandria to Mount Vernon, with shade trees and statutes liming its sides, from every State and Territory in the Union—a broad, beautiful boulovard, the gradest drive in the United States. If this be constructed Alexandria will be a half way place, a great resort for the drivers and riders and patrons of tally-ho-coaches, which will make the boulevard, during the fashionable season, resemble the drive from Hyde Park corner to Albert Memorial.

Alexandria has many historic landmarks which are as interesting almost as any in the land, and wore be to the vandal who destroys them to make way for the "march of civilization."

In a fire that occurred some years ago the Marshall House was almost destroyed, and its rebuilding has left scarcely a vestige of the place as, it was when Ellsworth was killed, but it is inquired for by every visitor, and the spot is viewed with much interest.
